

The last lecture is an impactful talk on a college professor's final message to the world before he dies tragically at a relatively young age. His impending death of cancer allows him insight into meaningful life advice, significant words of wisdom, and a great deal of optimism and hope for humanity. His words will leave you with a deep impact as he leaves behind valuable lessons for life and a room filled to the brim with emotions. He is following a tradition most college professors do in giving a last lecture at the end of an academic year, Randy gave his colleagues and students a last speech. He talked about the meaning of his life and what he thinks one should leave behind as a legacy.

Some of my favorite lessons from him were, one if you never give up on your dreams, eventually, some of them will come true, two, true satisfaction comes from helping others succeed; and three the simplest advice is often the most valuable. This last lecture he gives explores the meaningful insights on man gathered through his last moments on earth. This lecture will leave an impact on how you view your life and what you make out of it.
